

Statement on Psychotherapy

The Alliance for Therapeutic Choice and Scientific Integrity (ATCSI) is a non-profit professional organization that “functions as an interdisciplinary, professional organization dedicated to scientific research relevant to issues of human sexuality, homosexual attraction and behavior” (Alliance bylaws, section 2., Purposes of ATCSI).

As such, the ATCSI is committed to the promotion of science-based, mainstream psychotherapy. The organizational member clinicians include therapists who employ a wide variety of mainstream therapeutic modalities that aim to assist clients/patients who request their assistance in identifying and resolving issues that might prevent a heterosexual adaptation.

The Alliance for Therapeutic Choice and Scientific Integrity acknowledges a priori the biologically based male-female human design as the foundation for optimal psychosexual functioning.

In order to advance our mission of protecting client self-determination, preserving individual liberty, and avoiding harm for all mental health clients we welcome the opportunity to work with all individuals or organizations - regardless of political affiliation, sexual identity, or religious faith - that are supportive of preserving these fundamental human rights.
